UM'S DOZIER ELECTED PRESIDENT OF NORTHWEST BRITISH STUDIES

University of Montana history associate professor Robert Dozier has been elected to a three-year term as the president of the Northwest Conference on British Studies.

Dozier was elected to the leadership position, the first he has held in the organization, at the annual conference meeting at the University of Oregon, Eugene, last month.

The conference includes Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan. It is part of the North American Conference on British Studies.

Dozier, who has been a member of the organization since 1972, will be responsible for coordinating British studies programs in the region, arranging the annual meetings and representing the Northwest at the national meetings.

The conference consists of individuals interested in British studies like historians, writers, teachers and Anglophiles. It contributes to several publications concerned with English studies.

Dozier, who specializes in 18th-century English history, has been a UM faculty member since 1967.
